Activity description

The child is required to record a video sharing his/her experiences about parenting two plants. The experience sharing should cover:

- How did the child take care of the 2 adopted plants daily?
- What difference does the child see between the two plants in terms of plant's growth?
- How does the child feel about both the plants individually?

The child should adopt two almost similar plant in the same location (i.e. receiving same quantity of natural light & water). The child should take care of both the plants daily for at least 15 days (i.e. water them, ensure they are getting adequate sunlight, fertilizers if needed etc.). The child should talk with one of the plants extra nicely (be appreciative, compliment the plant, encourage, motivate etc.) & not talk with the other plant. The child should take a picture of both the plants daily for each of the 15 days.

After 15 days of doing these tasks daily, the child should record a video sharing his/her experiences as explained above. Record and submit video of the child.

Expert coach speaks

IKEA set up two identical plants in the school, and for 30 days invited students to compliment one plant and bully the other. The plants were kept under identical controlled environments. They each received the same amount of light, nutrition and water.

After 30 days, the plant that received compliments was healthy and thriving, while its insult-riddled counterpart was wilted and noticeably droopy.

We may not know for certain that plants are susceptible to words, but we do know they respond to noise.

It is an easy experiment to try at home & experience yourself.

Key benefits of this activity
